STATE REALTORS HOLD MEETING AT LAKE GOLF CLUB

Dave Walter Nominated State Vice-President For Next Year

An enthusiastic meeting of the Eighth District of the California Real Estate Association was held Wednesday evening at the Emerald Lake clubhouse. The meeting was held in honor of President Hal Hotchess, one of the largest realtors of San Diego and president of the state association.

Louis Pfau, vice-president of the district and a member of the firm of Coldwell, Cornwall and Banker, was chairman of the meeting. Other distinguished realtors present, included C. A. Peterson, director from Los Angeles; Glen Williams, director of association, who spoke in regard the special session of the legislature held this week at Sacramento, where he together with Peterson, Hotchess, George S. Graves, Roscoe Porter and other members of the legislative committee of the Real Estate Association, had been in attendance.

Louis Pfau spoke on matters of interest to the local real estate board, as well as the San Francisco board of which he is a member.

Short addresses were made by Fred Drake, president of the San Mateo County Chamber of Commerce, Daniel R. Stafford, city councilman of Redwood City, C. D. Jessup, George Leonard and D. L. Walter, state director of the association. Robert H. Smith, president of the Burlingame -San Mateo club, spoke for that body and Bradley Clayton of San Jose, president of the farm land division of the California State Real Estate Association, and A. McFadden, partner in the firm of Allen & Co. of San Francisco were also speakers.

The meeting was held at the club house upon the invitation of Leonard & Holt. Many of the distinguished guests spent the day at the club as guests of the club and were given the freedom of the links. They spent the day in golf and in enjoying the wonderful climate which was remarked upon by many of the visitors from the southern part of the state. Those who enjoyed the hospitality of the Emerald Lake Club included Phil Pachell, president of Baldwin & Howell; C. A. Harrigan, of Harrigan Weidenmuller Company; John A. Sullivan, president of Madison & Burke; Leslie Burke, secretary and manager of the San Francisco Real Estate Board.

D. L. Walter, member of the firm of Lambert & Walter, was nominated as vice-president of the state association, to succeed Louis Pfau. His nomination was seconded by McFadden and met with enthusiastic response from the members present. He is now state director of the association.

Town Promises Funds For Street Decorations

The city council will give a sum not to exceed $125 for the decoration of the streets here during the Pacific Aero show which is to be here for six days beginning September 25. The money given by the city must be matched dollar for dollar by funds to be raised by the chamber of commerce.

E. B. Hinman, president of the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce appeared before the city council at its meeting Tuesday evening and asked the support of the council for the aero exposition. Hinman stated that he had figures from a decorating firm in San Francisco which would place thirty streamers across the street and decorate the electroliers along Broadway and Main street for $250. It was felt by the town council that the affair would bring sufficient advertising to the city to warrant an outlay of $125 for decorations.

Hinman also stated that each merchant will be asked to decorate his store. The same company which will decorate the streets will take care of this, he said, at a cost of from 10 to 15 dollars to the merchant.

Bay Plans Presented By Engineer Dimmitt

City Engineer Dimmitt at the meeting of the Redwood City city council Tuesday evening presented proposed plans for the development of the Redwood City harbor. The plans call for the purchase of 40 acres of waterfront land, the erection of a wharf 300 feet long and the erection of a warehouse 40 by 100 feet. The cost of the project would be $102,900, Dimmitt stated.

The land upon which the city now has an option can be purchased at $1500 per acre and the cost of the warehouse and wharf is estimated at $29,000. The remainder of the contemplated expense is for the construction of a road and a spur track to the proposed waterfront.

Emmett Donnelly, chairman of the chamber of commerce harbor committee was present and discussed the plans with the city council. Today the councilmen with the engineer will go to the tract and view the proposed developments. An election will be called later in the year at which time the voters will be asked to ratify a bond issue to make the proposed improvements.

Earl Iunker, Dead, Was Well Known Here

The news of the death in Letterman General hospital in San Francisco recently was a source of sadness to many friends of the young man in this city. Iunker was a resident of Yreka and was married to Miss Thelma Knox, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Knox, former residents of this city. Prior to his marriage he was a frequent visitor at the Knox home here.

The Iunkers have been living at Yreka where Mr. Iunker maintained a garage. They have two small children, a boy and a girl.

STATE TO PASS AVIATION LAWS

(By Capitol News Bureau)

Sacramento, Sept. 6.—Until such time as the state legislature sees fit to draft a new set of laws governing aviation and its kindred activities, the present statute giving the division of motor vehicles authority to act will be enforced.

The statute will be enforced as of January 1, this year, according to A. R. Heron, director of finance, as the result of a conference of aviation experts, and state officials and will apply to licensing of pilots and planes, schools and instructors and airports.

That there is a tendency to clamp down on "aviation schools" which do not give students thorough training, employ competent instructors and otherwise do all in their power to insure safety of their graduates, was indicated by the financial chief who supervises the motor vehicle department.

New attempts at aviation legislation probably will be made at the January session, and the schools may be expected to receive a major share of attention then.

One movement, already broached to the state school authorities by A. C. Hugg of Los Angeles, asks that the school system take charge of all flying schools, his argument being that air pilots are now being licensed "after but cursery training".

PLANS COMPLETE FOR AERO SHOW SEPT. 25 TO 30

Interest Becoming Keen In Vote Contest For Queen of Air

While the Pacific Aero Club of San Francisco, supported by the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce and American Legion, were going ahead with work on the exhibits and other features of the Pacific Aero Exposition, to be held here September 25 to 30, chief interest in the affair this week turned to the race among a dozen Peninsula beauties for the Queenship of the show.

W. F. Hamilton, director-general of the exposition, formally started the contest last Wednesday. From that day until the opening of the air show each of the contestants will be working night and day to secure from her friends and supporters the votes that will land her in the regal throne where she will reign as Queen of the Air.

As such, she will ride in the royal float during the air parade that will be a feature of the show, and will rule the exposition ball and carnival from a pavilion on the show ground. She will be attended by a court composed of those who were in the race with her, but who did not win first place.

But her royal honors will be only a part of her reward. In addition, she will receive a free air trip to Los Angeles and return, and while in that city may have, if she wishes, a screen test at one of the moving picture studios. And greatest prize of all, she will be given a free course in aviation by the Summit Aircraft school—a course that will turn her out a full fledged flyer.

Those entered in the contest from Redwood City are Misses Dora Bertolucci and Audine Martin. Marie Reel and Miss Doris Johnston are running in San Jose, whil Miss Isabelle Buzard represents Menlo Park. In San Francisco Misses Dolce Gail, Lucile Hooper, Rose Keisner, Betty Muheim, Gertrude Nolan, Marie Parker, Pauline Wippern, Edna Mahoney, and Viola Anderson have taken part.

The contest is under the direct supervision of Mrs. Della M. Shisler of San Francisco.

SUPERVSIORS COUNTING BALLOTS OF ELECTION

The board of supervisors finished their work of canvassing the returns of the last election yesterday but the result of the vote will not be known until Saturday when the clerks will have completed their tabulation. Yesterday the board opened and counted the ballots of the absent voters. The vote made no change in the count as all the successful candidates had big majorities.

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Nash and George Morgan of San Carlos spent the holidays in a trip that took them over the Sonora Pass into Bridgeport and over the Tioga Pass into the Yosemite valley.

Well-Known Blacksmith Found Dead in City

Albert E. Bradley, well-known blacksmith of this county was found dead this week in San Francisco, according to word sent to his employer, Asa Hull of San Carlos. A report from the coroner's office in San Francisco stated that Bradley was found dead in the lobby of a hotel on Third Street in San Francisco, apparently a victim of lobar pneumonia. His body was removed from the San Francisco morgue to the parlors of Layng & Tinney in this city where it now awaits funeral arrangements.

Bradley was about 50 years of age, and was known as one of the best blacksmiths in the county. For many years he conducted a shop in the Homestead district, but had lately been working for Asa Hull, William Byrnes, George Durham, D. P. Flynn and others. He was a native of Australia, and is said to have several brothers and sisters in Brunswick, Australia. He had no known relatives here.

Evening School Offers New Courses

Many new courses are still open for instruction at the Sequoia evening school, according to Miss Anna Neff, principal.

Among these will be found courses in law, which not only prepare for state bar examinations but will be found of interest to business men and other citizens, says Miss Neff. Another new course is that of journalism by Miss Eunice Schmidt.

The new course in Oral Expression is taught by Miss Elizabeth Chase, instructor of vocal expression at Stanford University. There are also classes in public speaking, dancing, gymnasium work and swimming.

Classes in French and Spanish are being conducted, in which the direct or conversational method is employed.

Other classes in progress are artcraft, sewing, millinery and woodwork. The woodwork classes are for both men and women.

Bookkeeping, shorthand and typing will be given for elementary, intermediate, and advanced classes.

According to the instructor, Miss Rose Marie Kelley, attendance is 21 in the subject of English for foreign born. The classes will be for beginners as well as for advanced students. These classes will be held at the main building of the high school as well as at Five Points and later in the year at Menlo Park.

Registration is free in all classes. Text books will be furnished by students, excepting in the case of classes for foreign born.

Free Gets Big Vote

Congressman Free received his usual majority in San Mateo County at the recent election. By the official count rendered yesterday, Free received 7686 votes and Casserly 3582, a majority of 4104 votes.

Mrs. Casserly received the democratic nomination and will wage a vigorous fight against Free at the November election. As the Eighth District is overwhelmingly Republican it is quite certain that Free will be elected. He is to stump the East for Hoover and most likely will not be here for the campaign. His many friends in the district will conduct his campaign.

PERRY DOWNS MOVES TO NEW LOCATION

Perry Downs, who for the past nine years has been in business at 213 Main street, has moved into the recently completed store, under the Odd Fellows hall, at 241 Main street. Downs has been engaged in the bicycle and locksmithing business and will continue these lines. In addition he will carry a first-class line of sporting goods. He has acquired the agency here for the Wilson Western sporting goods considered one of the leaders of that line.

Searsville Burglar Gets Sentence in Jail

Louis Solomon, whose police record shows five previous engagements with the law under various other names, will spend three months as a guest of Sheriff McGrath. Solomon was sentenced to a term of 90 days in the county jail by Judge Geo. H. Buck this week for unattempted burglary in the Searsville Lake store. Solomon entered a plea of guilty to petty theft.

LEGISLATURE PASSES TAX FOR BANKERS

By CLEM WHITAKER
Staff Correspondent Redwood City Times-Gazette

Sacramento, Sept. 6—Redwood City banks and business corporations, except for public utilities, will pay a 4 per cent net income tax, starting with next year, unless the people fail to ratify a constitutional amendment adopted during a special session of the State Legislature here this week.

The two-day extra session of the Legislature, in addition to approving the bank and business tax, provided for a levy of 3 mills per dollar on intangible securities—the lowest rate in the state's history.

Bank taxes, under the new system, will be reduced more than sixty per cent, according to testimony before the Legislature, but the taxes of bank subsidiaries, including holding corporations, etc., will be increased.

The emergency tax situation, which resulted in the special meeting of the Legislature on Tuesday and Wednesday, came as a result of the invalidation of present tax levies against banks and intangible securities. A loss of $22,000,000 in state revenues threatened unless emergency action was taken, the governor declared in his message to the solons.

American Car Wins Norway-Sweden Race

The Norwegian-Swedish automobile race was won this year by Lief Mathiesen, who piloted an American car, a Graham-Paige, over the Oslo-Stockholm-Goteborg-Oslo course of 1550 kilometers (960 miles).

Mathiesen, who is one of the best known gentlemen race drivers in Norway, holds the records for automobile ice racing and for the famous Korketrakkern hill-climb. After winning the Norwegian - Swedish race, Mathiesen described it as one of the severest tests to which a car can be submitted.

Collins of San Carlos was awarded $5000 damages against the same defendant. Both Sharkey and Collins were struck by a car driven by Smith on the highway at San Carlos last December.

AGED INMATES OF STATE HOMES MAY BE RETURNED

(By Capitol News Bureau)

Sacramento, Sept. 6—Definite drive to turn all senile inmates of state institutions back to counties begun here by Director of Institutions Earl E. Jensen today brings San Mateo County face to face with probably increased costs of caring for its sick and indigent.

"State institutions should be curative in their nature rather than custodial," declared Jensen. "Our senile wards call for custody; for them there is no cure possible, except possibly in a very limited number of cases."

In the six mental hospitals maintained by the state, Jensen pointed out, there are now 1395 senile persons. If these were cared for by the counties from which they were committed, it would leave opportunity for treatment of many more mental patients who would benefit by the treatment.

Jensen believes that his department may take advantage of a state statute which provides that "the medical superintendent of a hospital may discharge any patient because such a patient is a case of chronic harmless mental unsoundness", and pointed out today that senility comes under this classification.

"The ideal cure for the senile," said the institutions director, "is their maintenance in homes relatives or friends. The care of the senile should really be a community problem. They should not be removed from home influences and environment, their relatives or their friends."

The state mental hospitals now are housing 13,879 patients, or 1586 in excess of their accommodations, and return to the counties of senile wards would almost reduce their population to normal, Jensen pointed out.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Polglase were visitors in Sacramento this week attending the State Fair.

BIG CAMPAIGN CONTEST OFFERS OPPORTUNITY TO WIN MANY PRIZES

A great circulation campaign, in which prizes and cash commissions amounting to approximately $2,000 are to be awarded by Times-Gazette. The contest, which opens next Monday morning, will be open to men, women and children—anyone living in in San Mateo county who seeks one of the prizes offered for obtaining subscriptions. Employees of this newspaper or their families are the only persons who may not enter.

There will be several prizes, all valuable. The first grand prize will be a Sedan of some well-known make and the second grand prize will be a coach of an equally good car. The cars will soon be on display and the kinds of cars to be given will be announced in next week's Times-Gazette.

The other prizes will be announced soon.

Success will depend on how much time entrants will be willing to devote to the enterprize. The campaign will last less than two months. Spare time afternoons or evenings may be turned into money during the period of the contest. It costs nothing to enter and everyone who enters will be paid for their time, as the Times-Gazette will pay a commission of 10 per cent on all money turned in by non-winning contestants who remain active throughout the campaign.

Where to Get Details

The campaign manager may be found at the Times-Gazette office each day from 8:30 to 10 a. m., where the entire matter will be explained and all necessary supplies will be furnished candidates. Or, if you prefer, call 857 and the campaign manager will call upon you at your home or place of business and give you all the details of this very generous offer.

The nomination blank is for your benefit, and if you wish to enter the competition for one of the big prizes, just clip out the blank and send or bring it to the Times-Gazette office, 61 Broadway, Redwood City.

If there is any reason you cannot compete, send in the name of a friend or relative, and if that one is the winner of the first prize you will receive $10 for nominating the winner.

Do not delay—start NOW!

Equal Prizes in Ties

Prizes of equal value will be awarded in case of a tie for any of the awards.

The Times-Gazette believes it is offering an exceptional opportunity in this campaign for those who are anxious to have an automobile. It is easy to obtain subscriptions to the Times-Gazette, issued Friday mornings and delivered by mail to all subscribers. Times-Gazette is carrying a greater amount of interesting news of the entire district than ever before. It presents a comprehensive report each week of the social religious, business and develoment news of the vcinity.

There are a great number of people in the district, many of them newcomers, who have not been approached for a subscription to their local newspaper. There are also hundreds of regular subscribers who will renew their subscriptions for another year for the asking. All count for votes and prizes offered. This is an opportunity that may not come again for a long time.

There are still 200,000 horses in California, as compared with 295,000 last year, a decline of 2 per cent, while there was no change in the estimated number of mules, a tribute to the latter animal's worth as a laborer where the tractor is not economical. Horses of all ages average $73 per head in value today as compared with $76 a year ago, while the mule's worth has declined from $89 to $83 per animal in the same period.

More than 300 carloads of cantaloupes shipped in one month from South Dos Palos in Merced county, approximately 10,000 bales of cotton to be picked this fall, a bumper crop of rice awaiting the harvester, a large output of mint oil; these are some of the developments attained in less than three years time in the Western San Joaquin Valley.

POULTRY

PROPER TIME TO FATTEN POULTRY

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Early autumn is the time poultry raisers will usually find advantageous to fatten and dispose of surplus cockerels as well as early hatched pullets of a quality not desired in the flock of winter layers. Market poultry prices are usually highest just before Thanksgiving and Christmas. Another advantage in selling surplus stock fairly early in the season is found in the saving of considerable food material.

Dr. M. A. Jull, poultry husbandman, United States Department of Agriculture, recommends as a fattening ration a soft mash, measured by weight, composed of corn, four parts; oatmeal, two parts; middlings, two parts, and beef scrap, one part. The ground grain should be mixed thoroughly and moistened with sour skim milk or buttermilk. Milk is excellent in fattening mixtures and about two pounds, or a quart, of milk is used to each pound of mash.

Care should be taken not to feed the birds too much during the early part of the fattening period. For the first few days of this diet feed lightly three times a day. For the rest of the period give the birds all they will eat three times a day but do not leave it before them. A four-pound cockerel should add a pound in two weeks. Four pounds of the grain ration may produce a pound gain.

Experienced fatteners sometimes keep poultry on the fattening feed for as long as three weeks; but in most commercial fattening plants the birds are fattened for from seven to ten days. There is often a difference of 5 cents a pound between the market price of thin and plump birds. However, farmers in many parts of the country may not find such advantageous marketing opportunities, and the prices received may not pay for the expense and bother of fattening the birds. In such cases it may prove wisest to sell direct with no attempt to fatten the fowls. Many such birds are bought at the markets by fatteners and conditioned and fattened for resale.

Culling Undesirable Hens From the Flock

Culling should be a continuous process from the time the egg is selected until disposition is made of the bird. With the young stock this constitutes removal of unthrifty birds. The pullets should be selected from the standpoint of size, relative rate of maturity, and health. On the other hand, with laying hens, other than the occasional removal of outstanding poor individuals, the ideal time for culling is at the end of the laying season, which runs from July to November. From July on the flock should be examined each month for the purpose of removing the poorer hens. Just how rigid the culling is depends upon the desired reduction of the flock. The later culling enables one to be more exacting in the selection of the superior birds. Obviously it is to the advantage of the poultryman to make more than one culling as he is thereby able to immediately cut down production costs.

Poultry Notes

If pullets are too slow in starting to lay, give them a wet mash daily for a week or so. That often starts them.

Ground yellow corn, with plenty of milk and a range of rape, clover or alfalfa, will keep the young chicks in good condition.

An effective way of eradicating lice is by means of sodium fluoride. It is easy to apply and inexpensive, and yet how many fail to take advantage of this valuable procedure.

The ventilation problem in the poultry house is much easier to solve if the hens are given enough floor space. Three and one-half square feet of floor space should be allowed for each hen in the flock.

The development of chicks will be checked and hens will stop laying if the common red mites are permitted to grow and develop. In warm weather mites multipl, rapidly.

More than $15,000,000 are lost each year because of fertile eggs put on the market from June to October. Most of this loss comes from the farms because the male birds are kept until fall or winter. It is the eggs fertilized by these males that rot after they leave the farms, causing heavy losses all along the marketing line.

Good poultry is necessary if there is to be a profit made by keeping it. Specialized farms are becoming more numerous, but for many years to come the main output of eggs and poultry meat will be supplied by the general farms.

Sweet or sour milk seem to give equally good results in chick feeding. When liquid milk is not available on the farm, it pays to buy a milk substitute. Dried buttermilk is a convenient form of milk substitute to use as it can be mixed with the mash.

Keep fresh water before the hens in summer.

A mixture of crude oil and kerosene is quite satisfactory for mite control, though several applications are required. The same is true of mixtures of kerosene and creosote which some use.

* * *

Corn can be used liberally when properly balanced with other feeds. It is rich in vitamins, oil and carbohydrates, but lacking in protein and minerals.

Labor Requires Protection

IN pointing out the necessity of the strict enforcement of the restricted immigration laws, Commissioner General of Immigation, Harry E. Hull, pointed out the benefits that the country has obtained from those laws and the dangers of laxity in their administration. He said in part:

"Consider, if you will, the fact that the total population of the United States in 1920 was 108,445,000,.and that during the following seven years up to the present time, that population has increased aproximately 12,000,000, of which total number approximately 43,000,000 persons are gainfully employed in the nation's industries.

"Then visualize, had restrictive immigration not been in effect, the addition of 8,000,000 aliens who would have absorbed a large part of our substance, competed with our American workmen, lowered wages, and menaced our social standards; and you will realize that the quota provision under restricted immigration has been the savior of our national life.

"How necessary it is, especially in times of unemployment distress, that our own wage earners shall have the first preference in creating and enjoying our own great national wealth. The chief sources of this wealth are found in manufacturing and agriculture. It would have been these two groups into which the bulk of the excessive immigrant classes would have been absorbed.

"Their scientific restriction along just and human lines is one of the noteworthy results of our national wisdom, legislatively exercised through Congress. Cheap labor is the parent of cheap and undesirable citizenship and widespread national distress.

"Even in the midst of our greatest prosperity we cannot afford to have such a considerable element of the population withheld from the virtues of assimilation and citizenship. On the whole, the immigration problem is a matter of citizenship and protection to labor with us.

"It must not be found, when American patriotism is demanded, that it is partially submerged beneath the burdensome principles of foreign autocrats. We cannot permit the entrance of those who will seek to tear down that which our forefathers so sacredly established. An everlasting citieznship which shall be full of faith of independence and freedom in government—a God-fearing, liberty-loving, righteous citizenship—must be our aim, and forevermore."

Stop Fires Before They Start

IT has been said that eternal vigilance is the price of liberty. It might with equal truth be said to be the price of every desirable thing which we possess, including the forests in our mountains. Occasionally these are menaced by the arsonists. But for every incendiary fire in the timbered sections of the state, there are five or six caused by rank carelessness.

Every year vast stretches of the finest timber in California are destroyed by fires whch could have been prevented had proper care been taken.

At this time of the year the danger is particularly great, as the grass and underbrush is dry and campers are numerous. So now as at no other time is an ounce of prevention worth more than the proverbial pound of cure, as the cure in this case can only be brought about by nature in her own good time which means a matter of about half a century.

County Tax Rate Gets 9 Cent Boost

The general tax rate for San Mateo county will be 9 cents higher this yean than last year. This was decided at the meeting of the board of supervisors held Monday for the purpose of fixing the rate. The adoption of a rate of $3.07 for property outside of incorporated towns and a rate of $2.57 for property nside of such districts, ended all expectations that a lower rate might be expected this year than last.

The supervisors this week completed the budget required by the new state law. The budget adopted calls for the expenditure of $1,147,049 by the county. The budget showed a lower salary and general fund, but this was more than compensated for by a raised requirement by the schools, high schools and junior college. The community hospital also showed an increased expense.

The items counted in the general rate are as follows:

General fund, $128,406, rate .288; salaries, $65,934, rate .148; schools, $278,540, rate .624; social service, $36,335, rate .082; county relief home, $25,865, rate .058; county community hospital, $100,415, rate .226; court house bonds, $5000, rate .011; court house furnishings, $900, rate .002 county highway bonds, $90,000, rate .202; county highway maintenance, $22,589, rate .051; high school maintenance, $196,440, rate .44; San Mateo Junior College $8,394, rate .036; county advertising $11,170, rate .025; count library $8910, rate .028; joint highway district for coast road $23,320, rate .05; joint district for Junipero Serra boulevard extension $23,320, rate .05; widening and repaving Middlefield road $25,000, rate .056; Gazos creek road $10,000, rate .023; San Gregorio creek road $10,150, rate .023; county revaluation plan $10,000, rate .023; unbudgeted reserve $22,700, rate .051; general reserve $10,270, rate .023; Memorial Park road construction $23,320, rate .05.

The assessed valuation of the county for fixing the tax rate is set at $44,644,889. For the county library, however, the assessed valuation is reduced to $34,055,962 as this is not assessable against San Mateo or Burlingame. The junior college s only assessable against the junor college district which is assessed at $23,686,050.

Dial Phones Are Installed at Palo Alto

Installation of dial telephones has been commenced in Palo Alto by the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company, according to an announcement this week by J. D. Worthington, manager for the company here.

This is the initial step in the telephone company's extensive project which will change the present method of manual operation to dial system service. Plans for the new telephone building to be erected on Bryant street east of University avenue, which will house the new dial system exchange, are progressing according to schedule.

In announcing this step, representatives of the company here stated, "We are starting to install dial instruments in advance of the time the new service is to inaugurated in order that our preliminary work may be completed gradually and without dsturbance. The dial will not be required and should not be used to obtain telephone connections until all of our preparatory work has been completed. Telephone calls from these dial telephones should be placed in the usual manner until such time as our customers are notified that the new dial service is in effect."

STROPPING IS ESSENTIAL TO THE PERFECT SHAVE

the new Million Dollar Razor

is a nation-wide SENSATION

Absolutely proves that stropping is essential to a perfect shave

THE new Valet AutoStrop Razor was introduced last May. It created a sensation. Small wonder, since it proved a vital fundamental of successful shaving.

Its automatic self-stropping feature demonstrated that all barbers are right—have been for 2,000 years. Because they always strop their razors before they start a shave.

The reason for this is that after the first shave the cutting edge of the finest blade that can be made is a row of minute needle points until it is properly stropped. This smooths out and re-aligns these tiny jagged hooks.

Everywhere wise men are turning to the new Valet AutoStrop Razor because it is the only razor that sharpens itself and assures you of a super-keen smooth shaving blade.

What's more, 21 years of research and a million dollars have been spent in improving the new Valet AutoStrop Razor.

Not only the razor itself but the blades have been materially bettered. A new type guard enables you to use the full shaving edge of these keener blades. You insert or remove them instantly by pressing a button. Blades are locked in a firm, non-flexible grip that eliminates vibration and pull. No need to remove the blade to strop and clean it.

Try the new Valet AutoStrop Razor. Give it a fair test. You'll soon be fast friends with it.

You'll enjoy the most perfect and fastest shaves you ever knew. And you'll hold up your hand and say "Never Again!" to the use of an unstropped blade.

Beautifully finished models complete with blades and an improved strop in handsome cases at $1.00 to $25.

REV. CHARLES DEEMS IS KIWANIS SPEAKER

Rev. Charles Deems rector of Trinity Episcopal church of San Francisco, and pastor of the Seaman's Institute of San Francisco, was the speaker Wednesday before the Redwood City Kiwanis Club. Rev. Deems was accompanied from San Francisco by Clarence Bennett, past president of the San Francisco Kiwanis Club, who acted as chairman of the meeting.

The talk by Rev. Deems was thoroughly enjoyed by the members of the club and their guests and is considered as one of the best since the organization of the club.

Better Fruit Needed To Hold First Place

(By Capitol News Bureau)

Sacramento, Sept. 6—If California's fame as the home of better fruits is to continued, it is imperative that growers and shippers exercise far greater care in their selection of products for sale in the Eastern markets.

That warning was sounded here recently by S. S. Rodgers of the State Department of Agriculture, just returned from two months spent in the East studying the quality and condition of California fruits and grapes when they reach the market.

"The Thompson seedless grapes received were considered very unsatisfactory," declared Rogers. "Large fruit commission firms declared that if the shipping of poor quality and green fruit from this state is not discontinued the market for all California table grapes will be ruined. Very many of the Thompson seedless grapes were sour and unattractive in appearance and shattered. When I left New York they were selling at 35 cents a lug box.

"Eastern buyers frequently asked why our standardization laws permitted fruit of the poorer quality to be shipped. The law, of course, sets forth only the minimum requirements. Growers should be particular to send only high quality products and shippers should refuse absolutely to forward green grapes.

"The Tokay grape season is just starting. In face of present conditions, Tokay men should be especially careful. By exercise of vigilance and prudent limitation of shipments to insure only the best quality being sent out it may be possible to recover the market for this later variety."

Except for grapes, the fruit shipments arriving from California were generally in satisfactory commercial condition, said Rogers, but too many of the apricots, plums and pears were too small and immature to find consumer acceptance without heavy price discount.

"Maturity of much of the fruit arriving was not too good," Rogers continued. "Many cars of Gravensteins reached the markets in poor condition, due to immaturity followed by bitter pit. This bitter and unfit condition amounted to as much as 30 per cent in some instances. Lack of color and unattractive appearance was particularly damaging in the shipments arriving during the first two weeks.

"Pears, too, arrived in unsatisfactory condition. Several California growers and shippers, apparently with much agitation, wired to me demanding 'What is the matter with the New York market on pears?' The objections made by most receivers were that of the pears sent from California there were too many small size and irregular shape. Maturity of pears this year was really quite satisfactory.

"Another reason for low prices, alleged by receivers, was that too many pears arrive in those markets in too short a period of time. Receivers asserted that better prices would have been obtained had the crop been supplied to the markets more gradually and the shipments limited only to first quality."

Noted Physicians Point Out Year 'Round Necessity for Ice

That the traditional carelessness of the American people is resulting in the neglect of one of the most important factors in the maintenance of public health, is reflected in the fact that only 40 per cent of the homes in the United States have provision for refrigeration of any kind and only 8 per cent take ice the year around, according to a nation-wide survey just completed.

This situation is considered the more strange in view of the growth of the ice manufacturing industry which produced 300 per cent more ice in 1926 than in 1904, and which today serves virtually every city, town and country hamlet through ice delivery systems or "cash and carry" stations, the survey revealed. Thus no household need be without the proper means of preserving foodstuffs, it was shown.

At the close of 1926, there were more than 6300 plants in the United States engaged exclusively in the manufactur eof ice for commercial purposes, as against 2218 in 1904. Capital invested in the ice industry totalled more than $850,000,000 last year as compared with $66,000,000 in 1904, and output amounted to more than 40,000,000 tons in 1926 as against 10,000,000 tons in the earlier year.

Public health authorities, including Prof. C. E. A. Winslow of the Yale School of Medicine, Dr. Charles Thom of the United States Bureau of Chemistry and M. E. Pennington, household refrigeration expert, concur in the opinion that food must be kept in a good refrigerator after it enters the home if it is to be kept wholesome and with its maximum of quality. And yet the people of this country are not heeding this advice, according to the survey.

It is pointed out by those authorities that moist or soft cooked food, if held more than a few hours, should be kept in a good icebox. They state that if such refrigeration is impossible, the food should be recooked before serving, even though showing no signs of spoilage. Meat, milk and vegetables, which contain much water, are the foods referred to as being moist. Use of refrigeration is the only means of preserving perishable foods and at the same time retaining their original freshness and flavor. Melting ice, providing the requisite amount of moisture in the air inside the icebox, has been found to be the best type of refrigeration.

Suit On File Here Against Traffic Line

A suit was filed here this week against the Peninsula Rapid Transit Company by Ross & Ross, attorneys for Mrs. Martin Matulich of San Mateo. Mrs. Matulich in her suit demands damages to the extent of $25,243 from the defendant company for injuries alleged to have been received when a passenger in one of the Peninsula Rapid Transit busses on June 2 of this year. The plaintiff charges that she was riding in the bus when it was struck by another machine and was run off the road.

Montgomery Ward Plan Erection Of Store Here

A piece of property fronting on Broadway between the highway and the railroad, has been purchased from Ellis J. Arkush by the Montgomery Ward Company, one of the largest retail establishments in the country. The purchase price of the property is reported to have been $35,000. The land was purchased several years ago by Arkush, who at that time planned to erect a new theatre building at that point. Later when he secured a lease on a theatre to be erected in the Hare, Brewer & Clark building, he abandoned this plan.

It is the intention of Montgomery Ward to build a large retail store here to serve the peninsula. It is believed that work on the new building will be started at once.

The sale of the property was consumated by the realty firms of Henry Witte and Whitcomb and Smith.

E. M. McKusick formerly connected with the office of County Engineer Kneese and now engaged in tax appraisal work in San Diego, was a visitor here this week. He left yesterday to resume his work in the south. Mrs. McKusick, accompanied her husband on the trip north and will remain here, as he exects to return shortly and will be engaged in Marin county.

Mrs. J. R. Fox of Duane street returned to her home here on Monday after undergoing a successful operation in a San Francisco hospital.

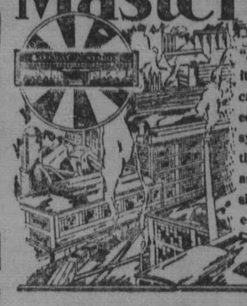
Distribution Without Waste

Mastering Distribution



"America has mastered production—mastered it more brilliantly than any other nation. The cry now is that distribution urgently needs to be equally mastered. The expansion of the chain system of doing business is supplying part of this need," so says B. C. Forbes, noted statistician and economist. In view of this statement it is significant that Safeway Stores ranks first in economy among the important food chains.

Graham-Paige Shows Gain in Registration

In fourteen of the largest cities in the United States in July registrations standings, Graham-Paige averaged seventh place, according to information received here by Carl Lindquist, Graham-Paige dealer.

In Indianapolis Graham-Paige stood third among all makes, and in Atlanta, fourth. Sixth position was held in Detroit, Cleveland, and Sioux Falls; seventh place in Chicago, Philadelphia and Butte, and eighth place in Los Angeles, Salt Lake City and San Francisco.

"The 50,000th Graham-Paige car was produced August 8th, marking a significant achievement by the three Graham brothers", said Lindquist. "They announced the new line January 7th, and up to February 8th, produced 650 cars. Since then, a continuous succession of new monthly records has brought the total to 50,000 in just six months.

"Graham-Paige set a new record for one day's production on August 14, when 516 cars were built in the regular nine-hour working day. Production is being maintained at its maximum to supply a demand that shows no sign of seasonal decrease usually felt in the industry following the spring buying peak. On the contrary, retail sales gained constantly throughout July, and the week ending August 4th exceded the best previous record by 220 car sales."

An Extension Telephone by your Bedside.....

is Aid and Protection in Emergencies

Sleep is better and safer when there is an extension telephone by your bedside. Calls to neighbors, fire department or police may be made instantly when the telephone is within reach.

Extension telephones are needed not only in emergencies. Wisely placed extensions save miles of steps in running up and down stairs and from one part of the house to another. They prevent embarrassment in making or answering calls when others are present. They avoid the loss of calls through failure to answer promptly.

In building a new house or in renting or buying a home, make sure that there is provision for adequate telephone service with the necessary extensions. Adequate telephone equipment is an essential modern convenience.

And it is very inexpensive. Extension telephones with all their protection and convenience cost only a few cents a week. Ask our Business Office to advise with you regarding the proper telephone equipment of your home for the greatest comfort, protection and saving of time.

VOLLY BALL LEAGUE BEING FORMED HERE

Roy A. Hohberger, Volleyball Commissioner for the Sequoia Athletic Club, after conferring with the members of the Business Men's Class which meets at the Sequoia High School on Thursday evenings at 5:30, announced the organization of an "Early Bird Volleyball League" which will start next Tuesday evening.

The league is being set up in such a way that new men can be accommodated any time during the league play.

The league is designed for the man who knows little or nothing about volleyball and as a sort of brushing up process for those who are old at the game.

Any man in the Sequoia Union High School District is welcome to enter. Volleyball is especially fitted for men of 25 years of age and over who desire light exercise and recreational fellowship and fun.

The personnel of the various teams has been set up so that there is at least one man on the team with several years' experience who will help the newer men in getting acquainted with the game.

The period is but an hour in length so that the men can get away by 6:30 p. m. if they so desire.

Enrollment for this class can be made at the Sequoia High School Evening School.

Those who have enrolled this Fall have been divided into teams as follows: "Black Birds", Ross Blake, Wilbur Doxsee, J. J. Stawell, Milton Johnson; "Pee Wees", Fred Blase, E. Higgins, P. H. Reimer, H. H. Duncan; "Hoot Owls", Walter F. Nichol, Ernest A. Fedderson, Albert Oneto; "Coo Coos", E. H. Simpson, Philip C. Clarkin, Clif Woodhams; "Woodpeckers", Clem Wise, Joe Baughn, Marshall White; "Jail Birds", Roy A. Hohberger, C. Stokes and A. Rossi.

VISITORS AT CAPITOL TO GET REAL SERVICE

(By Capitol News Bureau)

Sacramento, Sept. 6—Visitors to the Capitol in the future will find it pays to register.

Those who sign the black book which building custodians will offer will receive a nice picture postcard of the Capitol, and, perhaps, if plans now afoot go through, their choice of a selection of the bearded faces of governors of bygone days.

Too, a directory, showing locations of offices other than those housed in the Capitol, is to be located in the rotunda, near the statue of Isabella and Columbus.

Director of Education Wm. John Cooper has suggested that Columbus, having little else to do, might hold the directory in his hand.

NASH PRODUCTION HITS HIGH RECORD

While August opened for The Nash Motors Company with the greatest demand for cars ever recorded by the Sales Department, additional orders received during the month have placed the total number received in excess of 33,000, representing the largest demand for cars, for one month, in the history of the company.

Anticipating unprecedented demand for "400" series cars, production facilities of all plants have been increased and, even though the plants are producing more cars than ever before, the greatest possible production for this month cannot reach more than 21,000 or 22,000 cars.

While the Kenosha and Milwaukee plants are running at capacity and establishing new high levels of production, the Racine factory, which manufactures the Standard Six series, reached the largest production for a single day in its history on August 16th when 485 cars were produced.

This condition is all the more remarkable when it is realized that, although the cars were first announced on June 21st, just two months later 42,378 cars had been shipped to the dealer organization; and, notwithstanding the excellent production of all plants, the demand for the new series cars has increased steadily since the date of introduction.

In commenting upon the spectacular success of the new "400" series, Mr. E. H. McCarty, Director of Sales, said:—"The steadily growing demand for the new series cars and the voluntary comments we are receiving daily from owners to their performance, makes us feel that we are going to continue at this record business peak for some time to come."

The plans for September call for still further increases in production, consistent with the increased demand.

STATE FACES PROBLEM OF UNEMPLOYMENT

(By Capitol News Bureau)

Sacramento, Sept. 6—Span of life of Californians is increasing while the age limit for profitable employment is being shortened in industrial and agricultural centers of this state.

That startling fact was brought to light today by Will J. French, director of the Department of Industrial Relations, who asks all Californians bluntly:

"What do you propose doing about it?"

In a call broadcast to employers of all classes of labor, French today asked consideration for the man has turned 35 or 40, and at the same time urged every California citizen to lend his best efforts today abating this "unsatisfactory condition.

Time was when there was a furore over the assertion attributed to Dr. Osler of Chicago that men past the age of 50 should be chloroformed. Then came the period when the man of 45 found it difficult to obtain work. Rapidly the age limit dropped to 40, and now, according to French, 35 is the industrial danger line.

He points out that sentiment against the working man of 35 to middle age offers a serious problem industrially and economically.

"We are urging all, both employers and citizens, to take a broader view," he said, "and to consider employment from the standpoint of the ability of the individual. Age is an artificial bogey, and there are men past 50 capable of a better day's work than mere striplings.

HOOVER MEETS FARM PROBLEM

Urges Expenditure of Hundreds of Millions on a Workable Program.

FAVORS A HIGHER TARIFF

Farmers Should Control and Administer Federal Farm Aid, Says Candidate.

POINTS FROM SPEECH

It shall be an honest campaign; every penny will be publicly accounted for.

Having earned my living with my own hands I cannot have other than the greatest sympathy with the aspirations of those who toil.

The participation of women in politics means higher political standards.

Our workers can buy two and often three times more bread and butter than any wage earner in Europe.

By blood and conviction I stand for religious tolerance both in act and in spirit.

Government should not engage in business in competition with its citizens.

PALO ALTO, Calif.—Herbert Hoover met the farm question fairly and squarely in his Address of Acceptance at Stanford University.

Nearly one-third of his address was devoted to this subject, which Hoover termed "the most urgent economic problem in our nation today." He declared bluntly that farm relief must not be delayed by any monetary considerations, urging that "a nation which is spending ninety billions a year can well afford an expenditure of a few hundred millions for a workable program that will give to one-third of its population their fair share of the national prosperity."

The Republican candidate pledged himself to a farm-aid plan in which farmers shall themselves control and administer the federal financial assistance which he proposes to put into effect.

"The most urgent economic problem in our nation today is in agriculture," he said, "It must be solved if we are to bring prosperity and contentment to one-third of our people directly and to all of our people indirectly. We have pledged ourselves to find a solution.

"In my mind most agricultural discussions go wrong because of two false premises. The first is that agriculture is one industry. It is a dozen distinct industries incapable of the same organization. The second false premise is that rehabilitation will be complete when it has reached a point comparable with pre-war. Agriculture was not upon a satisfactory basis before the war. The abandoned farms of the northeast bear their own testimony. Generally there was but little profit in midwest agriculture for many years except that derived from the slow increases in farm land values. Even of more importance is the great advance in standards of living of all occupations since the war. Some branches of agriculture have greatly recovered, but taken as a whole it is not keeping pace with the onward march in other industries.

Cause and Effect

"There are many causes for failure of agriculture to win its full share of national prosperity. The after-war deflation of prices not only brought great direct losses to the farmer, but he was often left indebted in inflated dollars to be paid in deflated dollars. Prices are often demoralized through gluts in our markets during the harvest season. Local taxes have been increased to provide the improved roads and schools. The tariff on some products is proving inadequate to protect him from imports from abroad. The increases in transportation rates since the war has greatly affected the price which he receives for his products. Over six million farmers in times of surplus engage in destructive competition with one another in the sale of their product, often depressing prices below those levels that could be maintained.

"The whole tendency of our civilization during the last 50 years has been toward an increase in the size of the units of production in order to secure lower costs and a more orderly adjustment of the flow of commodities to the demand. But the organization of agriculture into larger units must not be by enlarged farms. The farmer has shown he can increase the skill of his industry without large operations. He is today producing 20 per cent more than eight years ago with about the same acreage and personnel. Farming is and must continue to be an individualistic business of small units and independent ownership. The farm is more than a business; it is a state of living. We do not wish it converted into a mass production machine. Therefore, if the farmers' position is to be improved by larger operations it must be done not on the farm, but in the field of distribution. Agriculture has partially advanced in this direction through co-operatives and

ROAD CONTRACTS LET FOR APPROACHES TO SAN MATEO BRIDGE

Contracts for the construction of five miles of highway approaches for the San Francisco Bay Bridge between San Mateo and Hayward have been let to J. F. Knapp, of Stockton, it is announced by Arthur Batty, president of the bridge company.

Bids for the work were called for early in August and the lowest bid was submitted by Knapp. The work covered by the contract will call for the expenditure of approximately $250,000. The highways will extend for three miles on the San Mateo side, connecting the western bridge head with the junction of Third avenue and the Bayshore Boulevard in San Mateo; and approximately two miles across the lowlands on the eastern side of the bay. The roadways will be thirty feet wide and surfaced with an 8-inch layer of concrete, in accordance with specifications approved by the State Highway Commission.

The contract calls for the completion of the work by December 1 of this year.

LD PEPPER TREES FALL TO PROGRESS

This week the ancient pepper trees in front of the detention home on Washington street, were cut down. They were planted 30 years ago by John Kerr and grew to be sturdy attractive trees, spreading and affording cooling shade to the pedestrian who halted when passing for rest and to enjoy the breezes that wafted through the peppery branches of the mammoth trees. It s to be regretted that such land marks that furnished comfort and enjoyment to mankind should be slaughtered It took a life time to raise them. When in the heydey of their usefulness they are ruthlessly cut down. They cannot be replaced. They are gone forever.

The robins coming from the north in winter time always found a shelter and a meal from the pepers in these trees. Other feathered songsters sang their sweet melodies while flitting from limb to limb and feeding on the fruit of the pride of the forest.

The trees are gone and like the song that is ended their perfume will linger long and live in the memory of those that admired them for years.

Workmen Begin Clearing Away For Broadway

Workmen were busy this week removing the Wahl and Thiel buildings from Main street to make room for the extension of Broadway. The buildngs were purchased last week by J. F. Archibald for removal.

Another step in the extension of Broadway was made at the meeting of the Redwood City council Tuesday evening at which time the deeds for all property involved in the extension of Broadway were presented to the council by City Attorney Mansfield and were accepted by the council. City Engineer Charles Dimmitt is also preparing plans and specifications for the paving of the street as soon as the buildings are removed.

HIGH SCHOOLS MAY SOON BE REPLACED BY JUNIOR COLLEGES SAYS COOPER

Sacramento, Sept. 6—Redwood City's high school for all its splendid and progressive record, is heading for the limbo of forgotten things. It will eventually give way to a new scholastic system which California educational leaders now see on the horizon, and the time is not far distant.

William John Cooper, director of education voiced this view today and declared that the rapid development of the junior college will make it possible.

"The time when the high school will disappear from the California school system appears not so far away," declared Cooper. Rapidly changing demands of the time point to this, together with the immense growth of junior colleges in this state.

Ultimately, we may expect to have an elementary school system embracing the first six years of school life. This will be followed by an intermediate school covering a four years course, and beyond that the junior college will take youth along the path of learning.

This will leave no room for the high school, for the intermediate school, according to the present trend, will be more along practical and utilitarian training lines than out present high schools. The junior high school of the future, of course, will cover a four-year course.

The whole question of who should pay for education of the state's children is headed for general discussion at an early date, Cooper believes, and there is a growing doubt whether the present system of general taxation is as fair as payment by those directly benefited.

The state school head hopes for an amendment in the junior college law regulating the size of communities which will receive these higher institutions of learning and also as to their size.

"It is possible that the time will come soon when the junior college will exist for three reasons," said Cooper, "first as a training school, next as a school of languages and third to take care of those sections of the state which are too poor to maintain junior colleges but need them badly."

The objective of Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, president of Stanford University to restrict entrance to that institution to upper classmen or junior college graduates is working out successfully, said the state educational chief, and at the University of California the decrease in enrollment in the two lower years and increase of enrollment of upper class men is coincident with the rapid increase of attendance in junior colleges throughout the state.

"And Julia won't be alone, either, now," said I brilliantly. "She has her uncle—"

"She wouldn't be alone long, anyhow," observed Nancy, demurely.

A faint flush mounted to Peter's serene brow, but he offered no rebuke. So we all smiled with highly spontaneous cheerfulness, and he observed modestly:

"Well, I'm not likely to start anything I can't finish!"

Nancy snorted.

But here came a fortunate interruption. Outside, a motor rolled up to the curb, and in walked Mr. Darrow, wearing a portentous expression; something important was impending, to bring him to the shop at this hour. Being one of the employees he spoke to, I said, careful, however, not to be too forward or unconventional:

"Good morning."

He admitted my existence, but not Peter's nor Nancy's.

"Good morning, Mr. Darrow," said Nancy, sweetly. "Isn't it lovely out so early!"

"Delightful, indeed," murmured Mr. Darrow, with slightly uncertain overcordiality.

"You don't know me," said Nancy. "I am Miss Burton. Miss Wilkes is kindly giving me special training to become Miss Fuller's private secretary. This is my brother."

"Ah-h-h!" observed Darrow. "Back, are you, Burton?"

"Yes, sir, assented Peter. Then, emboldened by our having survived Nancy's coup, he added: "I got a full set of the broadsides, Mr. Darrow; at a bargain."

"Ah!" observed Mr. Darrow. "You might come and tell me about it."

"He's a perfect dear, but he needs a lot of help!" sighed Nancy, viewing the retreating forms of the two gentlemen.

"Mr. Darrow needs help?"

"All men do, but I was referring to Peter. He's going to marry Julia."

"Is he?"

"Well, can't you see that? Is it always necessary to say everything right out? Aren't you glad?"

"If it proves to be true, I shall be very glad."

"Especially because you helped make it happen. Of course I did most of it; but you certainly helped."

"Do tell me how you did most of it, Nancy!" I begged.

"Well," began Nancy, with intense satisfaction, "the first night we were at Normandy terrace, the most terrible noise woke me up. It was Peter singing in his sleep; he does that sometimes, when he's very tired. I knew that trip to Richmond and the fuss about Malvina and his worry about me had just worn him out, and I certainly felt the pangs of remorse. But if he had gone on, Ernesto would have put us on the street; so I went to the keyhole and moaned like a banshee until he turned over very loud and was quiet. But that was not before I had made out what he was singing: a love song, and a slushy one at that! Peter—fancy! Then first thing next morning, he nearly swooned when he saw the paper, and tried to explain it by just mentioning casually that 'the young lady who fainted in the shop yesterday lives downstairs'!"

"You thought there was more to it than that?"

"Rather, when I heard that that young lady wanted Virginia books, that her grandfather collected them, that he was attacked in the law-book alcove; especially when I remembered that my old friend Brandon Tower had been after a book in Peter's suitcase which was an old Virginia law book. I couldn't relate all these facts, I admit, until dear Daisy Abbott helped me. She caught me in the hall one day, and chatted lovingly, and asked me quite incidentally how Peter had met Miss Grosvenor before!"

"She had detective aspirations, too. I fixed them. I'll tell you how, some time."

"I told Julia about my elopement so she would never be surprised at hearing of it indirectly, or think it was at all important, or that I cared a bit for him, ever. And she said I was a good sister, and rewarded me."

But here even Nancy had to stop a minute. Mr. Case arrived as vanguard of the staff, greeting us affably and passing on to his office with all the pleasant courtesy which had never deserted him during that past trying week, except once when old associations had been too poignantly aroused.

"Nice, notta?" murmured Nancy. "Some would say dull, but I say good."

"Correct," I affirmed. "How did Julia reward you?"

"She lent me this to bring here today," answered Nancy.

From her pocket she drew a small copper plaque, which she laid on my desk just as Captain Ashland, who had the moment before stepped out of a taxi, appeared in the doorway. One look, and with a shriek I bounded toward him, brandishing the plaque.

"The original!" I cried. "Colfax's own copperplate!"

He seized it, stared at it speechless.

"I say!" he ejaculated finally. "Yes, here's the circled serpent quite in form . . . and the ship . . . and the pillars . . . and the instruments. Where did you get this?"

"I got it!" announced Nancy, loud and clear; "I got it out of the little sewing-table in Julia Grosvenor's . . . I mean Julia Harrington's . . . house."

I glanced nervously at the captain, sorry for the allusion, in his presence, to the Grosvenor mystery; but to my amazement, he looked more interested than ever. I stammered:

"Out of the sewing-table? But it was a dummy; it didn't open—"

"That's what everybody thought," returned Nancy, ignoring the captain temporarily, for it was no time to explain to him about sewing-tables; "but Julia's mother must have discovered otherwise. And I suspected that table all along, myself; it was so curious and striking. Julia thinks her mother probably hid the copperplate there to safeguard her copy of the bookplate—that is, so that her copy would never be shown up by some engraved one being struck from the copperplate; she must have realized that, with everybody thinking the table was a dummy, the copperplate would almost certainly never be disturbed, especially if she hid the key, too. I tried the sewing table yesterday after I'd tried Julia's boxes, and given her the chance she wanted to talk to you and Peter. And there was this copperplate, all carefully packed into the little drawer, so it would never rattle, with this paper!"

Dramatically she produced an old, stained, yellow sheet. Bending our heads over it, the captain and I deciphered the following legend:

"To Dr. Charles Grosvenor
"from
"Hugh Colfax,

"this bookplate, in profound gratitude. "In his peaceful home, may he recall the great days of the Macedonian and the Esmeralda."

This was pure Greek to me, but the captain started back in amazed recollection.

"The Esmeralda?" he cried. "Why, that ship's one of the most famous prizes in England's nava. history! She was captured off Callao by the British fleet that went to the aid of the revolutionists of Chile in 1820. We've got it at last, I believe! Colfax's son must have been there!"

"He was!" I cried. "Never mind how I know; that can wait. But afterward he fell a victim to yellow fever, and his life was saved by Doctor Grosvenor, then an American naval surgeon. Though just how he happened to be on the spot I don't know—"

"I do!" broke in Nancy, determinedly, "Julia told me. That ship on the bookplate is the Macedonian, the doctor's ship, which was on a voyage and lying off Callao at the time of the action between the Esmeralda and the British fleet."

"But," I objected—I had been examining the copperplate closely again—"the Macedonian was a very famous American ship, Nancy, and Captain Ashland says this is a British-built frigate— Oh, my gosh!"

Just too late I perceived that my wonderful memory had not been quite wonderful enough. The sincerity of my contrition was such that the inelegance of its expression was overlooked by Nancy, who saw that she must quickly forestall questions hovering on the wholly perplexed captain's lips.

"You Don't Know Me," Said Nancy "I Am Miss Burton."

"Speaking of prizes," she said lightly, "the Macedonian was one too; it was captured in the War of 1812. . . . Oh, you remember now, do you, Constance? I guess you didn't take many prizes in history, did you?"

That nice Captain Ashland smiled his sweetest smile; in fact, he laughed aloud.

"Then the last of the bookplate mystery's solved," he declared, "thanks to Miss Burton!"

"How?" I demanded, recovering speech.

"Since the Macedonian was a prize captured by America in the War of 1812, that accounts for its being British built."

"Oh, dear! Then we've finished with the bookplate!" sighed Nancy, picking up the copper plaque regretfully.

"I haven't," said the captain.

"How so?" she asked.

"Because I've really just began on account of it. It had great influence, you see, in forming my decision to stay here."

"Here?"

"Yes, I'm staying indefinitely. My uncle always urged me to come, but my first morning here I wasn't very keen on it, I must admit. I felt put off a bit; safer in the war, what? But then you—and Miss Fuller, of course—drew my attention to—the bookplate, and so I've decided to stay and help in the business on this side. I telephoned my uncle my decision last night and I must be off now to see him, for he said he'd be here early to welcome me. I believe I'll have time to learn the business and do some other things I want to, now that Almy says he's through with me."

"Mr. Almy is through with you!" I ejaculated. "Why, what do you mean Captain Ashland? You weren't helping solve the Grosvenor mystery, all this time? And I never knew it!"

"'Helping?'" repeated the captain, dazedly. "I say, were you in it, too? I had no idea!"

"Oh, I didn't do much," I demurred feebly.

"Nor I! Just made a nuisance of myself soothing my uncle, and begging for tea, and insisting on an original for that copy of the bookplate, and what not."

"See here," said I, severely; "how long has Mr. Almy known, anyhow, that that book was an object of interest to the Grosvenor connection?"

The captain chuckled delightedly.

"Good joke on all of us, what? Why, you know, his interest in the case started when he heard Professor Harrington was among those present; of course, he knew about him personally, but he also remembered that the police had been called in when Harrington's library was robbed, some years back. So he reads that case over, to refresh his mind; and then, when he walks into my uncle's office, last Monday noon, there's one of the very books that was stolen, lying on the desk! And then, with all the Grosvenor clan rushing hither and yon for Virginians, the rest was easy."

"Oh, was it?" said I.

"Of course it was, when he had so much help from experts!"

"Mr. Almy," observed Nancy, irrelevantly, "told me one day to take care of my fine brother. So I did."

"We were puppets in his hands!" I murmured.

"Positive puppets," beamed the captain. "Going up, are you, Miss Burton? Do tell me how you took care of your brother!"

So young England and young America departed, each with a prize; or perhaps America had two, for Nancy bore off the Colfax copperplate.

"Miss Fuller, you seen the paper this maw'n?" A dark hand held out Daily Snapshots. "Bookshop Mystery," ran the largest caption: "Clew'a Denouement," above an enlarged reproduction of the spring-lancet.

"Is that there a clew, Miss Fuller?" inquired Ulysses, indicating the instrument.

"Yes, Ulysses." With sudden determination I resolved to ask him one question; he seemed communicative, for him. "Have you ever seen Miss Harrington, too? I mean, as well as her grandfather?"

"No," didn't know her 't all," denied Ulysses. "We-all knew Professor Harrington, of course."

"You mean, down in Virginia."

Fortune favored the bold. Ulysses proffered a single confidence:

"Yas'm; my old father, he lived with the Harringtons. They had elegant big white house all full of red-satin furn'ture. I loves grand furn'ture." Then he was gone with his Snapshots, leaving me with my thoughts and catalogue proof, which lasted me until late that afternoon, when, true to form, Mr. Roberts interrupted on the telephone.

"Are you busy?"

"No," I answered, also true to form.

Then I was kindly to come to Mr. Darrow's office. Not once before in nine years had I been summoned to the Presence. I wondered why Mr. Darrow should take the trouble to fire me personally, but marched into his cherrywood headquarters and faced him and Mr. Roberts with all the composure I could muster.

"Ah! Miss Fuller?" said Mr. Darrow, as if he wasn't quite sure. "Sit down. Now, in reference to that bookplate— You know what I mean?"

"I think so," I murmured.

"Miss Fuller showed considerable intelligence in that connection," interrupted Mr. Roberts.

"All Almy's efforts seem to have been crowned with success," said Mr. Darrow, hastily. "I have been glad to exert my poor influence to obtain for him the vacation he has long desired to spend with his worthy aged parents on their picturesque Maine island. I would not see one who has exerted himself in behalf of the cause of justice and my house remain unrewarded."

"Then don't forget Ulysses!" said I.

And, swearing both my astonished hearers to secrecy, I outlined Ulysses' epic of devotion, for such his whole course of conduct during the previous week had to be accounted. Without analyzing too closely the ethical aspects of his delay in identifying Mr. Grosvenor, it could be seen that it had won a certain advantage for Julia, by giving Ulysses time to sound Mr. Case and win his friendship for Mary Grosvenor's daughter. For he knew that Julia was also the daughter of Miles Harrington, without doubt. If the Harringtons had been his father's "family," if, thirty-odd years before, he had seen the professor, then a boy, down in Virginia, he must have known Miles, too; and an old colored nurse, long years a Grosvenor retainer, who had tended both Mary Grosvenor and her little daughter, had been sent home to Virginia for giving that child information that was to be kept from her. Far more important information, confided by that dying mother to her old nurse, must have gone the rounds of the log cabins in Elliot's Crossing, and found its way north again to one who secretly knew the gray-haired professor as more than one of the details of life in Darrow's.

And finally, Ulysses, seeing the spring-lancet under my desk that Thursday, had undoubtedly recognized it in some way. Exactly how, would never be known. Yet it might be safely assumed that his old father, with the interest in bodily ills characteristic of his race and class, had told Ulysses over and over again of the fine young naval surgeon who once, long ago, by means of a strange little brass box full of knives, had cured him of pleurisy. And it was the more likely that Ulysses had heard this story frequently because this admirable doctor was so strangely one of these no-count Grosvenors no Harrington retainer would have had use for. And so Ulysses, seeing the spring-lancet under the desk, and knowing the suspicion hovering over Julia and the evil reputation of her grandfather, had kept the secret in her defense.

"Is That There a Clew, Miss Fuller?" Inquired Ulysses, Indicating the Instrument.

"He must be rewarded," proclaimed Mr. Darrow, as I finished. "His discretion has safeguarded the interests of my house in aiding a favorable outcome of the investigation, and he has been loyal indeed to the former benefactors of his family."

"He expects a set of red-satin furniture," said I.

"He shall have it at once. Your interesting story, Miss Fuller, confirms me in the desire I have to discuss with you a certain matter, since it shows you have won esteem in widely varied classes of society—an asset, indeed. By the way, you have heard of the gratifying offer I have received for Clarihew's 'Notes'?"

"Not yet."

"Magistrate Juddes will give six hundred dollars for it. I let him have it for that figure; he desires it for a special purpose. He was particularly attracted to it by the significance of the substitute bookplate which you so astutely inserted, that bearing the motto 'Invictus,' most appropriate for his political purpose. You understand me?"

"Quite."

"I think, Miss Fuller, you do ordinary things rather well."

"Thank you."

"Now, with my nephew's most gratifying decision to remain here on my account, we shall unquestionably be in a position to increase our international business through his connection. He believes, accordingly, that it would be well if a reliable and experienced person could be sent to England very shortly for six months, to observe the conduct of Ashland's business, so that we might get their point of view as he is getting ours. Now, how do you feel about it? You understand me?"

"Captain Ashland's judgment is excellent, I am sure," I replied cannily, though nearly suffocating from heart failure.

"Ah! It interests you?"

"It sounds most interesting."

"Well, Miss Fuller, I am well impressed on the whole with your conduct in important matters during this past week. I am wondering if I could trust you with something larger."

"I should be so glad," I murmured humbly.

"I do not wish to startle you; but the fact is, I should like you to undertake this mission. I believe you have enough intelligence to serve my interests well."

"I'll say," said I, "you ought to believe it!"

"I assure you, Miss Fuller," said Mr. Darrow, soothingly, "you have my entire confidence!"

Cheerful and Sturdy Room for Small Boy

A small boy's room should be above all things cheery, sturdy—yes, but homelike and inviting. He does not appreciate all the dainty fripperies dear to his sister's heart. The wise mother plans his room so it is a pleasant place for him to store his treasures and entertain his friends without damage to fragile material and delicate colors.

As a beginning, if you are planning to refurnish your small son's room, select a warm two-tone tan-stripe paper, dark enough so dirt will not show, but light enough to give a cheerful light to the room. For decoration put one of the many bright-colored wall paper friezes at the top—about eighteen inches deep—showing in its spreading scenic design, vermilion and orange, blue and green on a cream or tan ground.

Monk's cloth draperies in warm golden brown with an orange stripe, with gold-colored undercurtains will be serviceable, surely, and decorative also. The drapery material may be used as a cover for the metal bed as well—perhaps fringed along its length. Bright colors may be added in vermilion pillows, green and red copies of old English prints on the walls and the banners and trophies dear to every youngster's heart.—Kansas City Times.

Is THIRTY the Love Deadline?

Mabel Herbert Urner, creator of "The Married Life of Helen and Warren," has maintained an ever-increasing popularity throughout the country for over fifteen years. She was born in Cincinnati and educated at home. In all her stories she has developed an inimitable technique of condensation; schools of journalism are using these stories as models of the short short-story. The realism and humor of her work have insured the unflagging enthusiasm of an enthusiastic public. In private life Mabel Herbert Urner is Mrs. Lathrop Colgate Harper.

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

If a man can't love after thirty—he can certainly give an excellent imitation! Documentary evidence on request.

His amorous age-limit? Is there any?

Not so long as he can roll out of bed, stretch his rheumatic legs, fish his bridgework from the bedside glass, camouflage his baldness with surviving hairs, adjust his bifocals, and hobble out with a swagger of his sportive malacca!

And why not? Must the heart harden with the arteries?

Doctor Durant idealistically defines love as "unselfish devotion." Few men at any age are capable of that.

But the masculine self-centeredness is less aggressive at forty than at thirty. The years tend to moderate his egoism. He is more considerate, or rather, less inconsiderate. As his girth increases, his ego diminishes. And oh, how much more comfortable to live with!

At fifty he is even more amenable. It begins to dawn on him that his manly charms no longer register A-plus. His sheik-complex waning, he strives to compensate with a little thoughtfulness and unselfed generosity—negligible in his before-thirty ardor.

All this may not be love, but common usage passes it for that commodity.

The feminine falling-in-love limit? Now quite as elastic.

Certainly the middle-aged flapper who prolongs her youth by calory counting, floor rolling, and facial plastice, also prolongs her ability to love. Her emotions vitalized by her physical rejuvenation.

I know a woman whose rear view registers in the teens, side-view twenty, full face, thirty. Actually she is forty-five. Doubtless if she persists in her spartan diet, exercises, and face-tucking surgery, at sixty she will look forty. And still be chronically in love!

Her grandmother at fifty, black-gowned and face-bonneted, was relegated to the fireside chair and the exciting role of knitting the family socks. Her falling-in-love instinct dead as Rameses II—extinguished by mid-Victorian clothes and conventions.

Now our bobbed and buoyant "milady" of fifty buys her gowns in the misses' department—size 16! With her permanent wave and stabilized physiognomy, she can confidently cross her chiffoned knees, conscious that her chic cloche is still in the ring. Still attractive enough to enamor and be enamored.

Haven't all age limits been advanced? If a woman in her late forties can skip the rope, stand on her head, chin the bar, work all day and dance all night—can anyone challenge her ability to thrill and flutter?

The confirmative growth of the beauty parlor—with its preponderance of middle-aged patrons!

Real youth doesn't mean having been born less than thirty years ago. When you retain an agile body and alert mind—why not emotional intensity?

The boundaries of youth, middle, and old age are no longer arbitrary. The age clock has been definitely and triumphantly set back.

The capacity of love ends only with senility. And with the accommodating stimulus of the monkey gland, that pepless, past-philandering period can be pushed forward to a cheering remoteness!

Set Time for Decision on Business Matters

"It often takes courage of a high order to sleep over an important idea or decision," says George Matthew Adams, "but it is worth it."

Actually, many of the decisions that simply must be made immediately are better slept over—and the calm decision to sleep over them often does take courage.

On the other hand, many of the decisions of business that can be made at any time within a matter of weeks, or even months, are usually slept over too long; they are slept to death.

A night's sleep is beneficial to nearly any important decision; a week of sleeping is often fatal—"In the Stream of Business," by Robert R. Updegraff, in the Magazine of Business.

Lucky Days

IN RUSSIA, when a man thinks the time has come to take a wife, he will put a turquoise ring into his pocket on Whitsunday and go into the Summer park (at Leninburg) determined to bestow this trinket on somebody before the day is over, but having no idea when he sets out who the lady will be.

A common saying runs:

"Born on Monday, fair of face,
Born on Tuesday, full of grace,
Born on Wednesday, sour and sad,
Born on Thursday, merry and glad,
Born on Friday, worthily given,
Born on Saturday, work hard for your living.
Born on Sunday, you will never know want."

The Spaniards hold Friday to be a very unlucky day, and never undertake anything, consequently, on this day. The Finns think Monday and Friday are bad days in which to transact business.

To wear green on Friday is lucky. It was on Friday that Columbus discovered America. George Washington was born on that day, and the Pilgrim Fathers reached the Plymouth Rock on Friday.

Word and Letter Divination

DIVINATION by words or characters is of very ancient origin, being used by the Greeks and Romans. A boy or man would post himself in a doorway and when consulted he would cast dice on a tablet which contained a number of verses. The verse on which the dice fell would be the proper direction. This form of divination was derived from the Egyptians.

Among the ancients there was also a divination by opening some poems at hazard, and accepting the first passage that turned up as an answer. Even Socrates believed in this superstition.

A species of word divination was called cledonismantia, the good or evil presage of certain words uttered without premeditation when persons came together in any way. It was a favorite method of word divination among the Pythagoreans; at Smyrna the oracles of Apollo were thus interpreted.

The Greeks often referred to misfortunes as being caused by the signification of proper names. Divination by the Bible and key is a form still practiced. A key is placed on the first page of the Gospel of St. John, taking care that the ring of the key is passed over the pages. The book is then closed and a cord attached to it. The person trying this form of divination places the index finger of his left hand in the ring, and pronounces the names of fifteen different places in which the treasures may be found. If the key moves on the finger that holds it, the omen is considered favorable and a search in the place indicated is made.

Use of Sharkskin

The chief use of sharkskin in the industrial field is to take the place of leather. It is used for making shoes, pocketbooks, traveling bags and other leather accessories. Sharks' meat is edible. The liver oil is sold and used for oil tanning of skins and in the manufacture of soap. The shark fins are a delicacy with the Chinese, as they cook them to make a gluten soup.

Farming in Alaska

Seattle, Wash.—Touring southeastern Alaska for an inspection of natural resources, Secretary of Agriculture Jardine will find farm life of the Far North in the midst of a colorful transition.

The "bachelor farmer," whose pioneer struggles are written into the agricultural history of every frontier, is slowly passing from the land he cleared of timber and is being replaced by men with families. Where his shack stood the new farmer is building houses and barns and his one-crop system of farming, is giving way to diversified activities, including the production of live stock.

Needing little and obtaining that principally from the forests, the early settler lived under conditions impossible for a man with a family. He planted his wheat or potatoes in the spring, left during the summer months to earn a "grubstake" and returned in the fall to harvest a crop that had received no attention.

Long-required diversified farming is coming in with the families. The small dairy farm grows more common and many vegetables are grown. In the region near Fairbanks the bachelor still predominates, and since the area is adapted to wheat and potatoes, it may take longer to introduce diversified systems.

Southeastern Alaska is rough, rugged and covered with timber. Comparatively little land in this region is available for cultivation. The rich farms are in the great Tanana valley, which, with the Yukon and Susitna valleys, has the essentials to make it eventually the granary of Alaska, in the fertile Matanuska valley and contiguous territory.

The secretary's plan to visit the southeastern section was motivated by his desire to see at close range the infant forest industry, other natural resources and the possibilities for preservation of wild life.

This newest Alaskan industry has none of the stampede characteristics of earlier enterprises. The gold rush brought rapid but short-lived growth in many places, but the paper-making industry is expected to be permanent. Scientifically developed, costly newsprint plants, with strict government supervision of natural resources, have been planned with a view to encouraging prosperous cities and towns.

Water-power rights for construction of mills at Ketchikan, the secretary's first stop in Alaska, and at Juneau have been granted by the government, and two companies are making preliminary investigation for actual construction work.

The United States will be paid for the timber as it is cut, and cutting will be done in accordance with forestry principles. The southern coast is covered with thick forests, and 95 per cent of the timber is understood to be excellent for the manufacture of paper.

Long Search for Honest Man Ends

Summitville, Colo.—For 24 years Jack Pickens kept secret the location of a "peak of gold" in the San Juan mountains until he could find a financial backer whom he would trust to help him open the treasure vault locked by nature.

Today Pickens and Judge Jesse C. Wiley, the honest man whom the prospector found after a search of a quarter of a century, are sharing equally the fortune Pickens discovered.

While prospecting over the hills about the Little Annie mine in 1904 Pickens stumbled on a protruding bowlder. He tapped the rock with his hammer. A piece broke off, revealing a layer of almost solid gold. Another blow dislodged more gold-lined slabs.

Beneath the surface of that bowlder, the prospector concluded, lay a peak of gold. Determining to keep the discovery a secret, Pickens also resolved to stay near his potential fortune. He obtained a job with a small force of miners at the Little Annie and then began his quiet hunt for an honest man with enough money to exploit the "strike."

Several times the owners of the Little Annie mine started tunnels toward the golden peak, and Pickens held his breath. He was greatly relieved as each of these projects was abandoned, one within eighty feet of his hidden treasure.

Finally the prospector met the man whom he could trust. He and Judge Wiley formed a partnership, obtained long-time leases on 40 mining claims, including the golden peak, and within six weeks realized $114,000 from the ore taken off only that part of the bowlder showing above the grass.

Since then half a million dollars has been hauled away and yellow metal worth many times that amount still is in sight.

Pickens has a wife and thirteen children with whom to share the fortune.

Fortunes Reaped by Humble Hands

George Carver, who was born into slavery in this country many years ago and was kidnaped by raiders and exchanged shortly afterward for a horse worth about $300, discovered many products derivable from simple substances From the peanut he obtained 167 distinct products, and from the sweet potato 160 products. He produced 300 dyes from dandelions, various trees and shrubs, onion skins and wood ashes, as well as paints and stains from the red clay of Alabama.

A story of a fortune accumulated by the thrifty habits of a coolie was unfolded in the Calcutta high court. An action was brought by the administrator general of Bengal in the case of a man named Dobey, who died without heirs and left property worth $125,000. Dobey as a laborer never earned more than 8 cents a day. His first purchase of property was a mud house on the outskirts of Calcutta, for which he paid 60 rupees ($20). This he sold at a profit of 400 per cent, and thereafter, by careful investment in land and properties, he continued to add to his wealth until, at his death, he left a fortune in the amount mentioned in the court proceedings.

OLD FOLKS SAY DR. CALDWELL WAS RIGHT

The basis of treating sickness has not changed since Dr. Caldwell left Medical College in 1875, nor since he placed on the market the laxative prescription he had used in his practice.

He treated constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a combination of senna and other mild herbs, with pepsin.

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with strong drugs?

A bottle will last several months, and all can use it. It is pleasant to the taste, gentle in action, and free from narcotics. Elderly people find it ideal. All drug stores have the generous bottles, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

The Easiest Way to Keep in Style

By MAE MARTIN

No woman would wear dresses, or blouses, or stockings of a color that's decidedly out of style or faded, if all of us knew how easy it is to make things fresh, crisp and stylish by the quick magic of home tinting or dyeing.

Anybody can tint or dye successfully with true, fadeless Diamond Dyes. Tinting with them is as easy as bluing, and dyeing takes just a little longer. New, stylish colors appear like magic, right over the old, faded colors. Diamond Dyes never spot, streak or run. They are real dyes, like those used when the cloth was made. Insist on them and save disappointment.

My new 64-page illustrated book, "Color Craft," gives hundreds of money-saving hints for renewing clothes and draperies. It's Free. Write for it now, to Mae Martin, Dept. D-143, Diamond Dyes, Burlington, Vermont.

Riviera Morals

E. Berry Wall, at a dinner in his Paris apartment, was talking about the Riviera.

"Beautiful but immoral," he said. "Perhaps the most immoral place in the world.

"One night at the Ambassadeurs in Cannes I heard a lovely girl hiss into the ear of a white-haired old boy with a decoration in his buttonhole:

"'Traitor! Deceiver! Don Juan! I'm done with you forever. Never speak to me again.'

"The old boy said mildly, 'What's the matter now?'

"'You swore to be faithful unto death,' hissed the girl, 'and I just saw you kissing your wife.'"

Takes Burros' Job

Motor trucks are pushing the burro off the roads of Peru. Produce which used to take three days to get to market is being taken to Lima by truck within a few hours, and this is only one of many contrasts between old and new in a country which is fast being modernized. Between Callao and Lima the new concrete highway cuts through Inca forts built years before Columbus. Below brown and barren hills, irrigated valleys show great fields of shoulder-high cotton being picked, orange trees loaded with fruit, and present day sugar mills set in the midst of cane plantations.

Will Study Old Bones

Washington.—Relics of a buffalo hunt held by primitive men near Folsom, N. M., thousands of years before white men came to America continue to puzzle and attract scientists. In response to a telegram from Folsom received by the Smithsonian institution, reporting new discoveries of stone arrows points and fossil bison bones, Neil Judd, a Smithsonian anthropologist, with other scientists, has set out for the scene of the excavations to examine the evidence.

The excavations are being conducted by the Colorado Museum of Natural History and the American Museum of Natural History.

The stone arrow-heads used in the hunt have been found close to bones of bison supposed to have become extinct in America long before men appeared on this continent. If the stone weapons were shot at this living game, as the evidence indicates, the conclusion of some scientists is that men must have inhabited America at least 25,000 years, possibly even several hundred thousand years. No evidence has ever been discovered in this country to show that the types of bison found with the arrow points have lived in America in recent times.

Dr. Oliver P. Hay of the Smithsonian institution is now engaged in studying some of the bones of these extinct bison. The bones found at Folsom belong to bison with flattened horns different from any living form, Doctor Hay states.

LOW AIM

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

WE WERE visiting Fortress Monroe, and were being shown about by the officers in charge. I had never seen artillery of that sort and I was interested in all the details and calculations incident to accurate marksmanship.

"Would you like to see the target practice?" the officer asked me. "We are going out this morning, and I should be glad to have you accompany me."

It was a new experience to me, and I accepted his invitation eagerly. I had never thought much about the details of aiming and firing one of these huge guns. Without considering the matter I had taken for granted that one aimed directly at what one expected to hit. I did not stop to consider that gravity pulled the shell down as it was hurled on its way, and that one must aim high if he is to hit even a low object at a distance. It seemed to me as I watched the muzzle of the great gun pointing into the air that the marksman was shooting into the clouds instead of aiming at the target a few feet above the surface far out in the ocean. I began more intelligently to appreciate what the poet meant when he said:

"Not failure but low aim is crime."

If one would hit an object at any distance away he must aim above it, for the gravity drags the bullet down. It is equally true of other sorts of endeavor in life; we fail very often from aiming too low.

Kent was dropped from college last year because of poor scholarship. He had meant to pass his work, but he had no ambition to do well. The last thing he wished to be was an "honor man." It seemed to him a foolish waste of time to do better than the average, and feeling so he aimed low, and missed the mark, failing in most of his work.

Father and mother were very much grieved and Kent himself was humiliated and begged to be given another chance. He seemed like a man newly converted and the dean tried him again. He was readmitted on condition that at least three-fourths of his work should be passed with a grade of C. Now C is far below the average of college, so that the mark at which Kent was to aim was not a very remote one, and not very hard to hit.

I had a letter from his father today. The boy has failed again. He had fully intended to get no grade below C, but the trouble was that he had had no intention of making A or even B. C was the mark at which his artillery was directed and he aimed too low. He failed one course and barely passed another and the second chance for which he had begged was lost.

"It seems too bad," his father wrote, "that he should have lost his opportunity by so slight a margin."

It does indeed, but Kent's failure but illustrates the failures of many men in business or in professional life. They are satisfied to be commonplace; they aim too low.

Ex-Kaiser Nears End of Wood-Chopping Job

Doorn, Holland.—Former Emperor William II of Germany has practically completed his woodman's task on his own estate. The imperial wood chopper must go elsewhere if he wants to take his favorite exercise of felling, sawing or chopping wood.

In his labors on the Hohenzollern estate, now covering a period of about eight years, the ex-kaiser was careful to remove only dead trees or such as hampered others in their growth or destroyed the symmetry of his park. It takes half an hour at a brisk pace to walk around the whole estate, which is inclosed by a high wire fence surmounted by barbed wire.

Sore-Throat Epidemic Teaches Pasteurization

Washington.—The epidemic of septic sore throat which raged in a small Massachusetts town, where over an eighth of the entire population suffered from the disease, is one more good argument in favor of pasteurization, according to the United States public health service. The infection has been traced to a single cow that had mastitis, a disease of the udders As soon as the milk was pasteurized, no more cases were reported. Pasteurization would have prevented the entire outbreak.

Nearly every community, large or small, that has provided for pasteurization of its milk supply has been driven to this measure by just such epidemics of milk-borne diseases. Apparently communities, like human beings, refuse to profit by each other's experiences.

Venice Opens Museum to Honor Marco Polo

Venice, Italy.—The memory of Marco Polo, Venetian explorer, is honored by the city of Venice with a remarkable oriental museum named after him and recently opened. A valuable collection of oriental suits of armor, swords, knives, porcelain, kimonos, screens, paintings, tapestries and other works draws students from all parts of the world.

The collection, representing the life work of the late Conte di Barda, son of the duke of Parma and member of the Austrian branch of the Bourbon family, was seized during the World war as part of the Austrian reparations payment.

Church Leases Farm to Pay Off Its Debt

Rapid City, S. D.—A four-hundred-acre farm on the old Sioux reservation is expected to pay the debt of the Rapid City Episcopal church in four years. The Men's club of the church, which has 80 members, has advanced $800, rented a farm near Waste, a little town 40 miles east of Rapid City, bought the necessary farm equipment and planted 100 acres in flax and 100 acres in wheat. Next year the whole 400 acres will be farmed.

The farm is seven miles from Waste, pronounced "Washti" and meaning in the Sioux language "good," and is the center of a farming country that never has known a crop failure in the 20 years of its cultivation. After the opening of the Indian reservation, the country between the Missouri river and the Black hills was a free cattle range until the building of the Chicago & North Western railway from Pierre to Rapid City in 1907 made it available to settlers.

Old Ideas Must Go

Neosho, Mo.—Old-fashioned ideas in Neosho have got to go, if they have to be pulled out by the roots. At least that seems to be the decree of a group of the town's citizens, who, wearing masks, uprooted several concrete posts and severed the iron chains that composed the "hitching rack" on the courthouse square.

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

The Dog's Jungle Hang-Over

The reason a dog turns around several times before lying down is said to be because his ancestors found it necessary to do so. The dog, being a domesticated animal, is a survivor of wild forefathers that lived in jungle-grass. If they wanted a comfortable bed they had to turn around several times to level the grass. Today's dog goes through the same process instinctively.

Thrilling and Fascinating Serial to Be Printed in THE TIMES-GAZETTE NEXT WEEK

Menlo Park

The dove season opened on Saturday last and many birds were killed by the local Nimrods. Edward O'Keefe, Joseph McCarthy, Warren Morey and W. T. Casey, the veteran hunter, killed the limit of fifteen in a short time. All report the birds plentiful in the hill country and the lowlands.

St. Joseph's Parochial School will open for the fall term next Tuesday. A big registration is anticipated.

The Menlo Park City Council held its regular meeting on Tuesday evening. All the members were present. Very little business was transacted as it was understood at a prior meeting that no business of importance would be taken up. The next meeting will be on Tuesday next when a volume of routine business will be transacted.

The Dairy Delivery Company communicated with the council saying that it would remove the milk stand near Ravenswood avenue at once.

The chief of police announced that he would file his monthly report at the next meeting of the council. The matter of the nuisance of vicious dogs in the city was referred to the chief of police to subdue the recalitrant canine.

Menlo Park has a very energetic and truly honest poundmaster. This week unwittingly he tagged the prize setter or Mayor Weeden and demanded $2 from Mrs. Weedeen who came to the rescue of the animal. She smilingly paid it and sent the good official away rejoicing. Not knowing the limits of the city and it would take a Philadelphia lawyer to determine them, he wandered into the estate of A. G. C. Hahn and demanded $2 as a license for the ribbon winner in the back yard. He was told to keep in his own bailiwick and not to interfere with the duties of the Atherton dog catcher. With profuse apologies the Menlo Park official sought the secred precincts of his own city.

The Menlo Feed and Fuel Company has awarded a contract for a large warehouse to be erected to the rear of Harry Morey's supply station on the highway. The Southern Pacific has constructed a spur track to the proposed site of the warehouse.

The many friends of Charles Cooley, a former resident of Ravenswood, are pleased to learn of the big vote he received at the recent election for supervisor of his district, including the City of Palo Alto. There were five candidates and Mr. Cooley came within a few votes of receiving more ballots than the rest combined. He will be a runner up at the November election. His election is practically assured. He has made a splendid official and deserves to be retained in office.

James Artini, the local hirsute eliminator, will be home next week from a trip to New York and Chicago. He has been gone all summer. His friends will be glad to greet him on his return.

It was rumored in Menlo Park yesterday that a big institution is to locate here. When the details are ironed out the announcement may be made.

The big demand for real property here would indicate that Menlo Park is in for a real estate boom. The coming of the Western Pacific is, no doubt, the last one that has brought this about.

Mayor Weeden with his wife and grandson motored to Sacramento to spend the week-end. While there he visited the state fair and says that it is better and bigger than ever before.

Doctor Hardy, the local dentist, has returned from a well-earned vacation of two weeks. He is now ready to take the stump for Hoover.

The Menlo Park Hoover Club is buckling on its armor for the campaign and hopes to wage a stiff fight for the Stanford man.

Gerald Halsey and his charming wife departed this week for a trip to Europe to be gone for three months. Halsey is a former Sequoia student and a former cub reporter for the Times-Gazette. He is now a widely-known attorney of San Francisco, enjoying a large and lucrative practice.

In the passing of Aaron Walters Gale on Friday last there was removed from this community a beloved pioneer, a local citizen and a man of the highest character and worth, a man who enjoyed the respect of all who knew him. Born in Cleveland, Ohio, nearly seventy-six years ago he was at an early age lured by the stories of the west whereby at seventeen he arrived in San Francisco and at once started for the Kelly Hill mine in Butte County where he worked for some time. The young man was fascinated with his occupation. He returned to San Francisco, but always had a longing for the diggin's and for a miner's life among the mountains and amid the tall trees far from the city's maddening crowd. Gale met and married Miss Margaret Brophy in San Francisco, the couple coming to Menlo Park in 1886. Mr. Gale was an expert carpenter and cabinet maker. For many years he worked for the late John MacBain and Weeden Brothers and for a time was employed on the Stanford University buildings. He was a member of the Menlo Park Baseball Club in the eighties, participating in numerous contests in those forgotten days. He was a fan, rarely missing a game in this section. As the evening of life approached he longed for the happy, carefree days of his youth in the mines and at the age of 67 he purchased the Kelly Hill mine where he spent his boyhood and began developing the property. It was on the noted Magalia Channel from which millions of dollars were taken in pioneer days. Here he spent the greater part of his remaining years delving for the elusive gold. He had developed the mine to the extent that it was about to be sold for a large sum just before his demise. Mr. Gale was one of a family of twelve boys and girls. The only one remaining is a sister, Mrs. Hogen, residing at the old home in Cleveland. Mr. Gale served as a trustee of the grammar school here for eighteen years and for twenty years was the treasurer of the local carpenter's union.

He had the distinction of being the oldest member of San Mateo County Knights of Columbus, being a charter member of that organization in which he always took an active part. Rev. William Lyons was among the priests attending the funeral on Monday. The priest was his Godfather and for years a warm friendship existed between them.
